Short Abstract:

Children and adolescents increasingly turn to mobile media devices, the smartphone in particular, to stay connected with family and friends and access a variety of digital media contents and services including social media, music, videos, and games. The everytime-and-everywhere-access to mobile media has changed children's and adolescents' everyday life with potential implications on their health and development. The preconference wants to address these issues both from a theoretical and methodological perspective.

Pre-conference topics:

- Role of mobile media in children's and adolescents' everyday life
- Methodological challenges of research on mobile media use
- Parental mediation and monitoring of mobile media use
- Impact of mobile media on children's and adolescents' psycho-physical health and development
- Mobile media and children's and adolescents' privacy
- Mobile media contents and activities: new phenomena or old habits
- Use of mobile media in school
